

One key idea in Brandt's theory is that "literacy is not simply an individual achievement but is shaped by social and cultural forces. But in her theory, she lacks the "the concept of self-sponsorship which also involve persons motivation to do things without any sponsorship, based on her theory she strongly believes that one need some connections order to succeed in their life. Which is not completely accurate.